Resources for Parents: Understanding Neurodivergence

Below is a collated list of resources to assist adults in understanding and supporting the neurodivergent children and young people in their world.

This list is collated from recommendations and is by no means exhaustive – please feel free to suggest additions or let us know if any of these sources are no longer operational or appropriate. While efforts are made to keep it up-to-date, no guarantees are made of the currency of links, content, or sources. Media will vary in their appropriateness for different ages – please ensure you review content yourself, and consider the individual needs of your young person before sharing resources.

We hope this list can be a helpful beginning in understanding neurodiversity that has something of relevance everyone, from the time-poor who wish to curate their media feed more purposefully, to the in-depth readers who work through every textbook. But remember no resource will replace the lived experience of your young person – they remain the expert on their own life.
